about us

The Journal of Law, Economics & Policy (JLEP)

JLEP is a recently launched journal. Its focus is on publishing creative, original, ground-breaking articles bearing on important questions of legal and economic policy and appealing to both academics and practitioners. The journal is student-edited and peer-reviewed, ensuring that published articles are of the highest quality. One issue each year is devoted to a specialized symposium and the second issue is a peer-reviewed compendium of articles submitted by individual authors. For more information about the journal, subscriptions or article submissions, please visit www.gmu.edu/org/jlep.

The Critical Infrastructure Protection Program (CIPP)

The CIP Program is directed by John A.

McCarthy, a member of the faculty at George
Mason University School of Law. The CIP Program works in conjunction with James Madison University and seeks to fully integrate the disciplines of law, policy, and technology for enhancing the security of cyber-networks, physical systems and economic processes supporting the nation's critical infrastructures. The CIP Program is funded by a grant from The National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST).

Property Rights on the Frontier

The Economics of Self-Help and Self-Defense in Cyberspace

Friday, September 10, 2004

Program Overview

This one-day symposium will explore current issues of self-help and self-defense in cyberspace, including:

- reflecting on how the legal and economic history of self-help has shaped the current environment:
- inquiring into the effects of various legislation on self-help measures;
- comparing and contrasting traditional forms of property with property in cyberspace;
- studying the feasibility of self-help; and
- examining the social costs of deploying digital rights management systems to protect copyrighted content.

The symposium will be filed for 6 Virginia Continuing Legal Education (CLE) credits. Filing status will be posted on the JLEP website.

Symposium

JLEP proudly held its inaugural Symposium, Property Rights on the Frontier: The Economics and Self-Help and Self-Defense in Cyberspace, on Friday, September 10, 2004, in conjunction with sponsorship from the Critical Infrastructure Protection Program.

George Mason University School of Law's Dean Dan Polsby kicked the event off by speaking about how the Journal's vision fits into that of the School of Law's and the appropriateness of the topic. The event then featured discussions of papers by eight distinguished professors:

(Click for bios)

- Richard A. Epstein of the University of Chicago School of Law (Self-Help: From the Stone Age to the Internet Age) ,
- Neal K. Katyal of Georgetown University Law Center (The Selfishness of Self-Help in Cyberspace and Community Self-Help).
- Henry E. Smith of Yale Law School (Self-Help and the Nature of Property),
- David McGowan of the University of Minnesota Law School (The Trespass Trouble and the Metaphor Muddle),
- Bruce P. Smith of the University of Illinois College of Law (Hacking, Poaching, and Counterattacking),
- Orin S. Kerr of George Washington University Law School (Deterring Computer Crime Outside of Criminal Law: A Skeptical View of Civil Liability Self-Help and Architectural Solutions),
- Douglas G. Lichtman of the University of Chicago School of Law (How the Law Responds to Self-Help), and
- Dan L. Burk of the University of Minnesota Law School (Legal and Technical Standards in Digital Rights Management). After each professor presented his paper ideas, lively question and answer sessions followed.

Attorney Adam R. Fox delivered lunchtime remarks to the event participants and Emily Frye, the CIP Program Associate Director for Law and Economics Programs, delivered poignant closing remarks. The day also concluded with a networking reception sponsored by Squire Sanders & Dempsey LLP.

Close to 100 participants took part in the event, including professors, law students, government officials and private practitioners. Among the organizations represented were the following:

- Federal Trade Commission
- United States Patent and Trademark Office
- National Defense University
